

August 2007

Bright Futures for Present Heroes

Many are calling the current job market an employee's playing field, a case of the high demand and low supply. But even in good times, landing yourself in a rewarding career that suits you takes more than merely finding any job that's available out there. For our nation's real-life heroes - the men-in-uniform - it's an even more arduous task.

Moving from the role of protecting the country to the private sector is a little bit of a complicated transition for them. They need to know how to make their unique experiences most relevant to the various public sector industries so that they can get the most out of their career.

This year, GMP once again participated in the Home Team career fair at the NS Clubhouse in Bukit Batok. At the fair, organised specially for leaving NSmen, the GMP team advised them on their possible options after their Official Release Date (ORD), and introduced them to a plethora of open careers with great salaries and benefits.

But great remunerations are secondary to a bright career prospects, and GMP took pride in the fact that these men were walking away with the possibility of a great future ahead.